Going Back To Dublin

Paddy is a Dublin man,
With a brogue no-one can understand
It's been a while since he left his green isle
But he's as Irish as they come
Sometimes when Paddy's in the mood
When the Celt within him fires his blood
He'll drink some drams and sing few songs
And dream of home

Chorus:

Paddy's singin' well tonight
Head thrown back and eyes closed tight
He sings his songs of Ireland far away
And how he's goin' back to Dublin one fine day

But Paddy sings a fading song
He knows he'll never go back home
A stranger there and an exile here
He lives somewhere in between
And the Ireland of his heart's recall
If it ever did exist at all
Now only lives and wistfully moves
Through Paddy's dreams
