Katie and the Dreamtime Land

The dusty miles we've come today were weary hard and long
But all that lies behind us now as we lift our voice in song
The joy of good companionship is written on each face
But for me around this fire tonight there is an empty space

Chorus:

And oh you would have loved it Kate, beneath those southern stars
As the night was filled with music, sweet songs and soft guitars
With faces in the fire light of those so dearly loved
With the Dreamtime land beneath our feet
And infinity – infinity above
And I sang "Cornflower Blue" and thought of you

There used to be a garden here when the Dreamtime land was young
And all creation bloomed and grew when the Dreamtime songs were sung
But the children of the Dreaming have long since been swept aside
With no-one to sing the Dreamtime songs, the garden slowly died

For dreams can crumble into dust if they never ride the wind
And loving hearts can turn to stone if they never learn to sing
Into the desert of my soul your songs fell like gentle rain
So I'll join you Kate in the Dreamtime song, until the garden blooms again.
